About the journal:

Algorithm: Journal of Computer Science and Computational Intelligence is an international academic open access journal that aims to establish a strong presence in the field of computer science and artificial intelligence. It is published biannually and is dedicated to the dissemination of original research and comprehensive review articles covering all areas of computer science, including but not limited to algorithms, machine learning, data science, robotics, intelligent systems, and computational theory. Submitted manuscripts will undergo peer review by the journal's editorial board and expert reviewers. Contributions must present original, previously unpublished research findings whether theoretical, experimental, or applied and must not be under consideration elsewhere. Articles should adhere to the journal's formatting guidelines and will be subject to editorial review and revision.
